

love is a strong word you can't just throw it around and let it get blurred most people fight for love you can't be one to judge love you don't even understand that word how can you tell every girl you love her when she is just going to get hurt when the giver of this word doesn't comprehend its power how can I even blame you for acting this way it's not like your childhood was filled with love at least that was what you would display you throw your heart at anyone that will take it if only your mother would have been the perfect fit I wonder how you would be if you had received love earlier on maybe it wouldn't be all you want how could you when you would tell me it was much more how could you say you were just bored my heart feels like it's being thrown to the floor

I gave you all of me in my mind you definitely scored but to you love is just another word